Norris Design Offers New Services and Hires New Staff

Leading Planning and Landscape Architecture Firm Hires Two New Staff and Offers Exciting New Services

DENVER, CO, October 10, 2007 — Norris Design, a leading planning and landscape architecture firm, announces the addition of two new professionals to its staff. The company welcomes John Overstreet and Ming Chew and is excited about their ability to offer new services to current and future clients.

John Overstreet, former Deputy Manager of Parks and Recreation for the City and County of Denver, has joined Norris Design as a Principal. John brings twenty years of experience working with public sector parks and recreation providers, teaching sports management at the collegiate level, as well as consulting with agencies across North America. His extensive background in both the public and private sectors enhances Norris Design's Parks and Recreation Planning and their park, trail, athletic field and facilities design team. John's expertise will allow Norris Design to provide the most comprehensive level of recreation planning and design services. Because of his extensive experience, Norris Design is proud to offer GIS Analysis and Planning as new components to their Parks and Recreation Design Services.

Ming Chew joins Norris Design as a Multimedia Coordinator. Ming brings ten years of experience in creating designs, illustrations, and animations in both two- and three-dimensional form. She holds a Bachelor of Arts in Media Arts from LASALLE-SIA College of the Arts in Singapore in addition to a Bachelor of Arts in Media Arts and Animation from the Art Institute of Colorado. Ming's fine art background and experience as a Creative Director has enhanced her expertise in conceptualizing ideas.

"The addition of Ming to the Norris Design team will provide a valuable addition to our outstanding 3D visualization and graphic design capabilities," said Norris Design Principal Sean Malone. "Ming's background as an Art Director and Media Specialist has greatly increased the number of graphic services available to our clients." With the addition of Ming, Norris Design now has a full-service marketing and graphic design team that can provide creative visual and verbal solutions to effectively communicate ideas and maximize their impact. They specialize in residential and commercial developments and integrate marketing and media efforts around a cohesive vision tailored to each project.
